-War is a fine apprenticeship to all sorts of trades. A soldier im Col. Cowdin's regiment wrote home: "I never knew I was so capable. I thought selling groceries was the extent of my capability; but it seems I can build houses, dig trenches, officiate in the hospital; and to morrow with a dry goods clerk, I commence building the chimney of a new hospital."

-THE MISSISSIFFI EXPEDITION .- Now that the Great Expedition of the Department of the West is prepared to move, and has already advanced a "the distance of eight miles beyond its former lines at Cairo, to a point of rendezyous at the mouth of Mayfield creek, or Fort Jefferson in the river below, it will prove interesting to our readers to be placed in the possession of the following par-ticulars relative to the fleet:

The military part of expedition is under grand army from St. Louis, joined by the col-umns of Gens. Grant, McClelland, Wallace and mith, from Cairo and Paducah—between 50,000

The naval part of the expedition is under the ommand of Com. Foote, who has superintended the construction and armament of the gunboats.

Com. Foote is an open hearted, affable sailor and gentleman, and is known in the navy as one of its most efficient officers. He distinguished him-self in China by the bombarding and breaching of the Chinese fort, the fort being, in all respects a superior work of masonry. The feat called forth the praise of all foreign naval officers on

A description of the flag ship of the expedition will give a pretty accurate idea of the construction and arrangement of the remaining gun-boats, being in general outline-similarly made. The flag ship Benton was built outside of the Congressional appropriation, having been built by the order of Major General Fremont. The contractor, Mr. Eades, was given almost a carte of ladies', misses', children's and gentlemen's blanche relative to her construction, and the result is that he has produced one of the finest and most formidable specimens of naval architecture affoat. The Benton was formerly the United States snagboat Tom Benton, subsequently Submarine No. 7, owned by Messrs. Eades into a gunboat. The work was done by Messrs. Moore & Daggett, of the St. Louis Dry Dock Company, under the superintendence of contractor Eades. The Benton is 86 feet long on about 5 feet. She has a double hull, with the wheels working in a recess near the stern. Her hull is four-inch plank, and timbers 8 by 10 inches. The hull is doubled by 5 foreand af: bulkheads and 13 cross bulkheads, making in all 45 water tight compartments.
